

Accompanying Resources for CELEBRATING BLACK HISTORY MONTH: What can Reparations Mean for a Community & What is the Role of Philanthropy?

- A Reparations Roadmap for Philanthropy, Stanford Social Innovation Review
- African Heritage Reparation Assembly Final Report
- Cities may be debating reparations, but here's why most Americans oppose the idea, NPR
- During Black History Month, Philanthropy Should Focus on the Future, The Chronicle of Philanthropy
- Fund to support Reparations Stakeholders Authority of Evanston, Evanston Community Foundation
- How Reparations Could Improve Black Health and Wellbeing, Robert Wood
 Johnson Foundation
- Museum of Natural History Closes Native Displays Amid New Federal Rules, The New York Times
- Philanthropy Must Play An Active Role in Reparations for Black People, National Committee for Responsive Philanthropy
- Philanthropic Reparations: Reckoning With the History of Wealth and Racial Capitalism, Stanford Social Innovation Review
- Philanthropy's Role in Reparations and Building a Culture of Racial Repair, The Bridgespan Group
- Reparations could heal America, Vox
- Reparations is an Investment in the Future, The Center for Effective Philanthropy's Newsletter
- The Cost of Inheritance, an America ReFramed special, PBS
- The Work of a Lifetime: Reparative Philanthropy, Relationships, Healing, and Joy, National Center for Family Philanthropy
- The politics of reparations: The path to racial equity requires more philanthropic investment, Philanthropy News Digest
- Traces of the Trade, POV, PBS
- Who should be eligible for reparations? That's the big question in Amherst, GBH News